The kind of Grandma I want to be!1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. What an experienceBy R. CoxIt's been a while since I embarked on that trip to Montana- the babysitter who joined her nine charges and their solo-mom on their vacation. While there were parts I had forgotten, there were also parts I clearly recall, like wanting to hop the next flight back to Texas once we got to our destination. Somehow through it all Carol has an amazing ability to create great camping trips and still keep her sanity and this book makes a wonderful travel-log of all the places she's been, most of which I did not experience first hand.An interesting read with the addition of suggestions and advice for future campers. Who knows, I haven't been camping since that summer back in 1990, but my son and I are considering the concept now. Now all we need to find is a decent dutch oven and good pairs of hiking shoes.1 of 2 people found the following review helpful.

Grandma's on the GoBy Lynne A. MartinA very informative compilation of camping/RV-ing tips learned on the road, mixed in with incredible stories of how this single mom involved her many children in active learning experiences on the road all over North America. She is an inspiration for other women who may lack her kind of guts to venture out of her comfort zone with common sense, a strong faith in God, and an insatiable drive for exploration. Having shared some time with the author in a camp setting in Alaska, I have learned much from her wealth of experiences first hand and vicariously through this book.

A gusty, determine Weishampel combines her love for travel with parenting nine adopted kids as she progresses from primitive, tent camping to a series of motor homes--while providing a loving nest for her charges. Follow their adventure through 26 states, Canada, and Mexico as she and her kids dig for dinosaur bones, ride out storms, and explore God's creation.

About the AuthorWhen not on the road, Carol V. Weishampel, a retired teacher with a doctorate in education, lives in Houston with her youngest son, Chris, two Shelties, and six cats. She Homeschools Chris, often while on the road in her RV, and volunteers extensively.
