the traditional sense, It's sitting across the kitchen table listening to an old friend speak wistfully about an adventure of discovery he and his grandson experienced during the summer of 2014 as they wound their way along the nearly 1,800 miles (each way) along Interstate 15 from San Diego, Calif., to Alberta, Canada, looking for Jewish stories and finding them in some unexpected and fascinating places along the way. Make yourself a nice glass of tea with a few macaroons on the side and be prepared to be entertained. I trust Don Harrison will be schlepping through other parts of America down the road.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. This is an interesting read that is enjoyable.By Sandy GoldenI plan to meet with Donald H. Harrison soon for some advice and wanted to see his writing style. I normally would not read a travel book and don't remember ever doing so, but what a pleasant surprise. I liked it a lot. It's an enjoyable read loaded with pearls of local knowledge and interesting facts, and even some humor. I felt like I was along for the trip and had my own knowledgeable tour guide. I learned a lot from this book and you will too. Especially if you are Jewish, it is worth your time to get and read. Even if you are not Jewish it is worth your time.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Knows how to be serious when called for and funny at almost any timeBy dan schafferFinds Jewish stories in the most unexpected places, and all of the tales are interesting. Harrison has a gift for writing clearly and to-the-point. Knows how to be serious when called for and funny at almost any time. I Look forward to DH's next travel book.

A grandfather and grandson go on a 3,600-mile round-trip odyssey from San Diego, California to Lethbridge, Alberta, discovering Jewish stories--some of them quite unusual-- wherever they go. On this trip Harrison and his grandson stop at various tourist and historical attractions and uncover the hidden Jewish links. This book can be used as a guide book or as a heart-warming collection of short tales.
