George H Tsegeletos : Under the Sea of Cortez: (early underwater exploration and spearfishing) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Under the Sea of Cortez: (early underwater exploration and spearfishing):

Ten years (1962-1971) exploring the Undersea world of the Sea Of Cortez (Gulf of California). Spearfishing large fish, swimming with Giant Manta Rays and Sharks. A non-fiction account that is both informative and of interest to the new diver. To the "Mossback Diver" it brings them back to an earlier era of underwater exploration which brings them the adventure they still long for. Included within these pages are Black and White Illustrations along with 49 color photographs, taken when Diving Photography was pushing to the forefront as the leading interest in underwater diving.

From the Author At times it was a hair raising experience and at times very humorous, but always an exciting adventure. One of the photographs stands out in particular, taken on our first encounter with a Giant Hammerhead Shark (Sphyrna mokkaram) and estimated by experts to be 18 feet in length, was a highlight of our adventure. We had the opportunity to sight this Giant animal on several occasions over a period of three years.
