William Rowe Boutwell : Virginia Tourist (Classic Reprint) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Virginia Tourist (Classic Reprint):

Excerpt from Virginia Tourist The writer has a practical knowledge of the places of which he is writing, and is prepared to take the visitor over the ground and explain the different attractions Without perplexing him. I have first considered Old Point Comfort, because it is here the visitor is likely to stop first. He has heard of the salubrious climate, the wonderful restorations to health, the unsurpassed sea bathing, the famed Hygeia with its most excellent management, fish, oysters and soft - shell crabs and other delicacies of the bay, over and over again. Thousands, by their patronage of this place, attest to the correctness of this, and a simple allusion to the matter is all that is necessary. Mr. Harrison Phoebus, former proprietor of the Hygeia, won for it a national reputation, which is being admirably sustained by the present management, and it is at this time one of the most popular and fashionable resorts on the coast. The building is most comfortably furnished, and as for the inner man the most capricious and exacting can be pleased.
